A Few Words From The Chair

By Dr. Ross Burkhart

I am very pleased to welcome you to this newsletter. We are "going electronic" this year, saving on paper and postage and becoming a bit more environmentally friendly in the process, we hope.

The newsletter this year pays special tribute to some of our Political Science students who are participating in the Ronald E. McNair Scholars Program at Boise State. You will learn more about their work and ambitions. The McNair Program is an innovative effort to identify and mentor undergraduate students who are likely candidates for graduate programs and who are from backgrounds that are not traditionally well-represented in graduate programs.

Students such as the McNair Scholars are beneficiaries of several named as well as general departmental scholarships: the Willard Overgaard Scholarship, the Avery Peterson Scholarship, the Stephanie Witt Scholarship, the Frank Church Public Affairs Scholarship, and the John Keiser Public Affairs Scholarship, to name a few. I would like to extend a special invitation to you to make a gift to the Boise State University Foundation to help endow these scholarships. Thank you for your support of our program!

Members of our faculty have had significant publication success. Brian Wampler has published his book on participatory budgeting in Brazil with Penn State University Press. He has also lent his expertise to the World Bank and has just returned from a World Bank conference in South Africa on this innovative topic. John Freemuth and Greg Raymond have published books on environmental politics in the American West and on foreign policy decision making regarding the Iraq War. They, too, give frequent talks on their areas of expertise. Their work is representative of our ethic of doing our best in the classroom, with the pen, and in the community.

This newsletter would not have been published, and frankly the business of the department would not take place, without the expertise and professionalism of our office staff: Sarah Cuellar and Tricia Trofast. We owe them our thanks.

We also thank our adjunct instructors for their course offerings, which allow us to offer courses on our distributed campus. Our 2007-2008 adjuncts are David Christensen, Matt Christensen, Stewart Gardner, Christopher Innes, Xabier Irujo, John Keenan, Becky Miller, Carole Nemnich, William Overton, Guefong Pu, Bobby Schneider, Steve Shaw, Meredith Taylor, Norman Weinstein and Steve Wilson.

I hope you enjoy reading about our department.

Sarah Cuellar,
Office Specialist II

FOUNDERS LEADERSHIP SOCIETY

The Founders Leadership Society was established in 2003 to recognize graduating students for their outstanding leadership involvement, both on campus and in the community. Induction into the prestigious society will provide students with opportunities to mentor other students and to participate in meaningful activities to enhance their personal and professional leadership growth beyond graduation. Criteria for the award include leadership skills, commitment to service, an appreciation for diversity and academic achievement.

2007 Founders Leadership Society

Mallory Atkinson, Audra Green, Kersti Harter (Canadian Studies minor), and Jeremiah Hudson were among 25 Boise State University students inducted into the Society in 2007.

2008 Founders Leadership Society

Kylie Boggess, Britton Holdaway, Michael Reed, and Geneva Román were among 21 Boise State University students inducted into the Society in 2008.

2007 Founders Leadership Society Graduates:

Mallory Atkinson

Audra Green

POLITICAL SCIENCE “WOMEN MAKING HERSTORY”

Three Political Science students were among those honored by the Boise State University Women’s Center at the “Women Making Herstory” recognition reception in March. Audra Green, Holly Hayman, and Lindsey Rhodes were all honored for the significant contributions they made toward enhancing the status of women at Boise State and in the greater Treasure Valley community. Congratulations to Audra, Holly, and Lindsey!

McNair Scholars Learn to Excel at Undergraduate Research

THE POLITICAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT HAS BEEN FORTUNATE this past year to have three special undergraduate scholars undertaking significant research projects under the auspices of the Ronald E. McNair Post-Baccalaureate Scholars Program: Pankhuree Dube, Geneva Román, and Simon Tu. Funded by the U.S. Department of Education, the program's intent is to provide historically underrepresented groups in graduate education special mentorship so that they can more successfully apply to and enroll in graduate school. McNair Scholars undertake intensive summer research projects under the supervision of a faculty member, and present that research at conferences and symposia. They also receive instruction on among other things identifying appropriate graduate programs to which to apply, creating competitive applications, preparing for the Graduate Record Examination, and learning networking skills. Over the past three years the McNair Program at Boise State has placed 80% of its graduates in graduate programs.

What follows are the thoughts of Pankhuree, Geneva, and Simon about the McNair Program.

Dr. Brian Wampler and Kylie Boggess, Top Ten Scholar

TOP TEN SCHOLAR

Top Ten Scholars are chosen from among the top 10 percent of Boise State's graduating class each year. They are selected based on academic performance, recommendation from college deans and extracurricular and research activities. Each student also honors a Boise State professor who was particularly influential to his or her success. Kylie Boggess was selected as a Top Ten Scholar at Boise State University for 2008. Her honored faculty member is Dr. Brian Wampler.

Pankhuree Dube

PSN: Could you describe your summer research project?

Dube: This past summer I studied social movements in the developing world and the emergence of a transnational civil society. In my paper, I argued that even though civil society organizations may represent the rights of one group (the indigenous, for example) they can ultimately work to enhance substantive democracy for every member of the polity.

PSN: In what ways has the Political Science department assisted you in conducting your research and in your undergraduate career?

Dube: Dr. Ross Burkhart agreed to be my mentor and met with me every week over the summer to guide me in my research. He patiently helped me with the long process of narrowing my scope. He further helped my research by introducing me to the literature within the subfield of democracy studies. I read classic texts by Robert

Dahl, Guillermo O'Donnell, Seymour Martin Lipset and others. He also recommended an article taking a more unorthodox approach by Kenneth Bollen and Pamela Paxton which looked at the organic development of democracy in tribal societies. In graduate school, students are expected to have a familiarity with classic texts in the discipline of Political Science. Looking through the reading lists that prepare graduates for their board exams, I came across books I had already read for my research this summer. That made me happy!

PSN: What does it mean for you to attend graduate school, personally and professionally?

Dube: I can't think of any other place besides graduate school where you get paid to read and think and form opinions. To me, graduate school is the Mecca of nerd-dom and I look forward to being surrounded by people who are as excited by books and ideas as I am.

PSN: Where do you see yourself ten years from now?

Dube: I would love to be studying social movements and conducting field research in both Oaxaca, Mexico and central India. I'd like to have a string of publications and be recognized as an authority within my subfield. I want to be engaged in exciting work that gives me hope. Fairly modest goals, right?

Geneva Román

PSN: Could you describe your summer research project?

Román: Thanks to the paid fellowship awarded to me by the McNair program I was able to explore the role of Human Rights in the International Political Economy. I correlated the loan amounts awarded to countries with their human rights records in order to determine whether or not human rights are a substantial consideration for international banks. By analyzing the African Development Bank Group, Inter-American Bank and the International Monetary Fund, this study also sheds light on whether international financial institutions are upholding their legally bound human rights obligations. Using Ordinary Least Squares and General Least Squares regression models I found that human rights have little influence on bank decisions. Human rights are not a substantial consideration in lending practices and development banks are not fulfilling their international legal obligation to advance human rights. It is up to international political institutions to ensure that they do.

PSN: In what ways has the Political Science department assisted you in conducting your research, and more broadly with the McNair program?

Román: The Political Science department and its chair, Dr.

Geneva Román,
McNair Scholar

Scholarships

EACH YEAR THE DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE awards scholarships to full time political science majors.

In addition to the general political science scholarships, the Department of Political Science offers the following special scholarships:

The Frank Church Scholarship is awarded to a student with a demonstrated record of community service and the potential for leadership in the public sector.

The Dr. John Keiser Public Affairs Scholarship is awarded to a sophomore, junior, or senior student who has a minimum 3.00 grade-point average and has demonstrated involvement in community service and/or public affairs.

The Dr. Willard Overgaard Scholarship is awarded to student who is a member of the Xi Chi Chapter of Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society. Dr. Overgaard was a former chair of the department and a professor of public law before his retirement.

The Avery Peterson Scholarship is awarded to a student with an International Relations emphasis in Political Science and an interest in the Foreign Service. Mr. Peterson was a Foreign Service Officer and taught for the department in the 1970s.

The Dr. Stephanie Witt Political Science Scholarship, is awarded to a student who has a minimum 3.00 grade-point average. Dr. Stephanie Witt is a former chair of the Department and currently serves as Director of the Public Policy Center for the Department of Public Policy and Administration.

Application information is available each January at the department's office and website. Later in the spring, the department's scholarship committee reviews the applications and makes recommendations to the department chair on who should receive scholarships. A ceremony is held at the beginning of the fall semester to honor the recipients.

The department considers these scholarships an excellent opportunity to recognize our students' academic excellence, achievements, and other contributions.

Ross Burkhart, were pivotal during my research project. The quality of my research depended on the accessibility of the Computer Lab, Dr. Burkhart's guidance in providing materials, editing my writing, and counseling me during the ups and downs inherent of the research process. Additionally, it was the effectiveness of the department as a whole that prepared me in qualifying for the rigor of the McNair program in the first place. I owe Dr. Burkhart and the department many thanks.

PSN: What does it mean for you to attend graduate school, personally and professionally?

Román: McNair's intention is to academically and professionally elevate underrepresented students. Graduate school means gaining access to the education and networking needed for underrepresented populations to penetrate the exclusive system of political and economic decision making and profit sharing. As a Latina, first-generation, low income student, getting accepted into a PhD program is an essential way for me to contribute back to the well-being and voices of the underrepresented populations of which I am a part and is also essential toward removing the demographic and economic barriers that are unnecessary obstacles for a large part of a population with superb scholarly capacities.

PSN: Where do you see yourself ten years from now?

Román: I hope to have completed my PhD in five years and will like to have started a family then too. Five years after that I hope to be an effective agent in turning Humanitarian principles into international law through the efforts of NGOs. Of course I must always allow for surprise in the anticipation of future work. You never know where life may take you.

Geneva Román,

UN Conference

Simon Tu

PSN: Could you describe your summer research project?

Tu: With Dr. Ross Burkhart as my research mentor, I developed a formal research proposal that merited a $2,800 Ronald E. McNair fellowship, which facilitated my analysis of the relationship between economic globalization and income distribution in the United States. Unlike previous studies in this area, I expanded the conceptual definition of "economic globalization" beyond a neo-liberal focus on international trade and capital mobility to include a previously neglected factor of global production processes, namely international labor mobility. Happily, I overcame the difficulties associated with measuring a hidden population and operationalized international labor mobility by disaggregating the foreign born population into authorized and unauthorized groups. project contributes to the study of economic inequality by assessing the impact international trade, capital, and labor flows have on income distribution in the U.S.

PSN: In what ways has the Political Science department assisted you in conducting your research, and more broadly with the McNair program?

Tu: The McNair Scholars Program helps prepare undergraduates for graduate studies through exposure to research and other scholarly activities, and the department's faculty members are a critical component in this enrichment process. As my summer research mentor, Dr. Ross Burkhart has been extremely generous with his time, talents, and abilities and was instrumental in the success of my research project. In addition to working with Dr. Burkhart on my original research, I strengthened my research and classroom skills by working as a research assistant for Dr. Brian Wampler and as a regular guest-lecturer for Dr. Dick Kinney's "American Chief Executive," a demanding upper-division course. Like Dr. Kinney, Dr. Steve Sallie has offered to open up "International Political Economy" to one or more of my lectures. These research and teaching experiences contributed to my growth as a scholar and reveal the collaborative spirit of the Political Science department and McNair. Normally, a McNair Scholar has one mentor, but I have been fortunate to have four mentors, all dedicated to my success in graduate school, in the political science department.

Simon Tu, McNair Scholar at the White House

PSN: What does it mean for you to attend graduate school, personally and professionally?

Tu: On a personal level, attending graduate school is nothing short of a revolution for me and my extended family. For the past three generations only two of my cousins, one on each side of my family, have earned a high-school diploma; I advanced only to the 10th grade and earned a GED. Remarkably, at the time of this writing (late February), I have been offered admission with full or generous funding to five of the country's most highly-ranked PhD programs. While my grandparents do not understand the full significance of my academic success, they do know graduate school is a big deal and are extremely proud of me. We are full of unprecedented joy at this moment.

Professionally, enrolling in a PhD program means I can build on the teaching and research experience I have gained at Boise State University. Through my graduate studies I will have the opportunity to establish a solid research agenda that will serve as my key to gaining employment within the professoriate where, ideally, my intellectual and creative abilities will be rewarded by the academy and, perhaps more importantly, the students I serve.

PSN: Where do you see yourself ten years from now?

Tu: I will have earned a PhD in political science and may be employed as a researcher and teacher at a university that serves primarily low-income and underrepresented students. Whatever the demographic of the university I work in, I hope to bridge the gap between that university and the community it is embedded in by teaching "at-risk" high-school students through summer seminars that are designed to cultivate successful college students while addressing the community's most pressing political and socioeconomic issues.

Interns

SINCE BOISE STATE IS LOCATED

in the capital city, a large number of internships are offered to our political science majors. These internships allow students to gain important experience, make valuable contacts, and earn academic credit – sometimes they even get paid. Many of our students took advantage of the internship program during the 2007-2008 academic year.

Political Science Association

By Geneva Román, President

PSA ROCKED THIS YEAR! 2007 has come and gone and the Political Science Association (PSA) will remember it fondly. After September's preliminary meetings with great student turnout, all members produced prime ideas for fundraising and volunteer activities.

Geneva Román, President
Political Science Association

PSA threw the well-known Faculty-Student Dinner late October at the delicious Basque restaurant, Leku Ona, that we all loved the year before. On November 6th, PSA members were hard at work at the polls raising money and learning more about the Ada County elections process. In December we were proud to help the Model United Nations group with their Global Impact Dinner. The event facilitated student organization camaraderie and an uncensored discussion on "Racism and Misconceptions in the Middle East." PSA also attended a "Service Saturday" with the Volunteer Services Board.

Officers this year included me, Geneva Román, President; Perri Gardner, Vice President; Secretary Rhiana Quick; and Rachel Johnson as the Treasurer who graduated last fall. We wish you the best of luck Rachel! Rhiana has admirably filled her position since then.

Spring 2008 has been full of activity with more to come. We had a great turn out of volunteers for the YMCA Youth Government in January. Inspiring high school students to pursue political studies is important for the enrichment of the department.

February was a busy month for the PSA. Following several power meetings, on February 6th members attended and staffed the Democratic Caucus per the invitation of legislators. Also, February 19th was our fascinating sneak preview movie night – a documentary looking behind the scenes of the Idaho Legislature.

During the first week of March, PSA helped publicize Japan Club's Japan Week. PSA volunteers staffed a booth at the Majors' Fair March 12th. All volunteers were aptly rewarded at our Spring Banquet the next day at the Taste of Memphis restaurant, where 49 people attended.

The 1st week of April brought Canada Week. Then, from April 23rd-26th the PSA will volunteer for the large YMCA Youth Government event, once again looking to inspire young students.

Finally, we are all looking forward to the "End of the Year BBQ" just before graduation. The PSA officers and I would like to thank all members for making this last year a proud and productive one and we would especially like to thank Dr. Ross Burkhart, our advisor, for guiding our organization for over 10 years now.

Faculty Honors Congratulations!

Dr. Les Alm received the 2007 Tenured Faculty Award for Research from the College of Social Sciences and Public Affairs.

Dr. Ross Burkhart received the 2007 ASBSU Faculty Recognition Award.

Dr. Dick Kinney received the Honors College Outstanding Faculty Award for 2006-2007. He won the award for his excellent instruction of the Honors section of POLS 101 American National Government, which he has taught for many semesters.

Pre-Law Society

By Jonny Carkin, President

Jonny Carkin, President
Pre-Law Society

The Boise State University Pre-Law Society was founded in 2005. It has been the club's mission to provide students with information and encouragement that will help them aspire to law school. I have had the privilege of serving as the president of this organization since 2007.

We have three meetings every semester that are open to all who are interested. We host these meetings with panels from the Young Lawyers Association who offer valuable advice concerning the different ways one might finance a legal education and the career paths available to those with law degrees.

Last fall, the Pre-Law Society also hosted a tour of the Idaho Supreme Court. Former Chief Justice Gerald Schroeder and Justice Warren Jones led a discussion on the role of the Supreme Court in Idaho, its history, and offered advice to the students in attendance. Every year we hold a Law School Admission Test and Law School Admissions Council information meeting. At this meeting we help students with the admission process by helping them navigate through the LSAC web-site. We also have students who have recently taken the LSAT come in and discuss their study strategies and offer advice on taking the test.

Every fall the society hosts our annual law school admissions dinner in which admission officers, representing laws schools throughout the northwest, offer a rare insight into the admissions process. The panel discusses what they look for in prospective law students, the importance of personal statements, and how much factors like LSAT scores and grade point averages influence their decisions.

At our last meeting in February, elections were held. Due to their approaching graduations, vice-president Holly Hayman, treasurer Stacy Falkner, and secretary Heather Wray did not seek re-election. Their hard work and dedication has been invaluable and they will be missed. I would like to take this opportunity to welcome the new executives with whom I have recently had the pleasure of working. The new officers are vice-president Mike Olsen, treasurer Charles Walsh, and secretary Carlos Soriano. I look forward to working with them over the course of the next year.

Finally, I would like to thank Dr. Jeremy Ball (Criminal Justice Administration), Professor Michael Bixby (College of Business), and Dr. Ross Burkhart for their help and support. I would also like to thank our advisor, Dr. Lori Hausegger. Without her, there would be no Pre-Law Society. Her efforts have been crucial to the society's success. It is through her efforts that we have managed to facilitate all of our events. Hope to see you all at the next meeting. For more information about the Pre-Law Society, contact Dr. Lori Hausegger at lorihausegger@boisestate.edu.

Pi Sigma Alpha National Honor Society

By Perri Gardner, President

Perri Gardner, President
Pi Sigma Alpha

to gather together with fellow students of political science and discuss shared interests and goals.

In the spring, the Boise State's Xi Chi Chapter of the National Political Honor Society, Pi Sigma Alpha, helped sponsor an annual Recognition Luncheon to bring together department interns and intern supervisors, Political Science Association members, Pre-Law Society members, and members and new inductees of Xi Chi. This year's Recognition Luncheon was very successful and fun as students and faculty came together to honor each others accomplishments.

This year we invited Boise State graduate Sadie Babits to speak at the luncheon. Sadie is an award winning journalist who currently is the News Director for Boise State Radio – an NPR affiliate station. She graduated with honors with a political science degree from Boise State University with an emphasis in international relations in 2002. Sadie was a Pew International Journalism Fellow which took her to the East African country of Kenya to report on sustainability and water issues. She's won numerous awards including a National Edward R. Murrow for investigative journalism and top honors from the Society of Environmental Journalists. It was inspiring for students to hear of Sadie's experiences and accomplishments after graduation from Boise State.

Following the speaker, Pi Sigma Alpha honored its current members and inducted new members. Pi Sigma Alpha is a national honor society that holds its members to the highest academic standards and inducts new members once an academic year. Pi Sigma Alpha inductees for 2007-2008 are Sarah Cuellar, Nicolás Diaz, Pankhuree Dube, Matthew May, Jason Wagner, and Joshua Zimmerly. The current officers for Pi Sigma Alpha are Perri Gardner, President; Sarah Cuellar, Vice President; Matthew May, Treasurer; and Jason Wagner, Secretary. The Xi Chi Chapter and the Department of Political Science would like to thank the National Pi Sigma Alpha organization for the grant which helped to fund this event.

Pi Sigma Alpha would also like to thank two wonderful people who have helped to keep our organization running: Dr. Brian Wampler, Advisor, and Tricia Trofast, the Administrative Coordinator. These individuals have worked diligently to keep Pi Sigma Alpha running smoothly. ## Meet our Adjuncts: Dr. Stephen Shaw

SOME OF OUR ADJUNCT INSTRUCTORS have taught courses in our department for possibly longer than they care to admit. Their faces are oftentimes as familiar to our students as are the faces of the full-time faculty. We asked Dr. Stephen Shaw, who has taught American National Government, Contemporary Political Ideologies and Constitutional Law for us since (gasp!) 1987, to take time from his busy day-job teaching in the Political Science and History departments at Northwest Nazarene University as well as directing the university's Honors Program to answer a couple of questions from us about what makes him tick.

PSN: What got you interested in studying political science?

Shaw: I grew up in Louisiana, where politics was as constant as the humidity and perhaps a substitute either for war or NFL football. My father, not a well-educated person formally, read about and followed politics a great deal, and I remember our parents taking us voting with them. I always liked reading history, biography, and books about various issues or events, and in college I just knew I wanted to study political science, although at that time I was unsure where it would take me.

PSN: What do you hope students take away from your courses?

Shaw: I think the primary thing I hope they take from my courses is a greater sense of critical awareness of what Ralph Ellison once referred to as "our unfinished country." To put it in the context of American politics, the experiment in self-government continues to be conducted, and each of us, in his or her unique way, helps conduct this experiment. I really do believe in what Justice William Brennan meant by "the citizen-critic," and I hope our students do, too.

Thanks for all you do in instructing our students, Dr. Shaw. And we are sensitive to the fact that you earned your Ph.D. from the University of Oklahoma, so we promise not to remind you of the 2007 Fiesta Bowl score too often.

Dr. Stephen Shaw

Faculty Notes

DR. LESLIE ALM, Professor, serves as Chair and the Director of Graduate Studies for the Department of Public Policy and Administration at Boise State University. He had two refereed book chapters published (“Linear Correlation and Regression,” Handbook of Research Methods in Public Administration, Second Edition with co-author Susan Mason; and “The Policy Process and the American West: An Environmental Perspective”, Environmental Politics and Public Policy in the West, Revised Edition; a book that was co-edited by John Freemuth), and completed two paper presentations at national conferences. Alm and Ross Burkhardt completed the final research from a Canadian Embassy grant of $7500.

DR. ROSS BURKHART, Associate Professor and Chair and Co-Director of the Canadian Studies Program, had his article “Democracy, Capitalism, and Income Inequality: Seeking Causal Directions,” published in Comparative Sociology. Burkhardt also published the chapter “Political Institutions in the United States” in the book Politics in North America: Redefining Continental Relations, edited by Yasmeen Abu-Laban (University of Alberta, Edmonton, Canada), Radha Jhappan (Carlton University, Ottawa, Canada), and François Rocher (Carlton University, Ottawa, Canada), published by Broadview Press. In addition, Burkhardt and Les Alm published “Is Spotlighting Enough? The Commission for Environmental Cooperation” in the Canadian-American Public Policy monograph series.

Burkhardt made several academic presentations as well. He presented papers on democratization at the International Studies Association and American Political Science Association conferences in Chicago. He also presented papers on Canada-US environmental policy at the Pacific Northwest Political Science Association conference in Spokane and at the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States biennial conference in Toronto. In addition, Burkhardt gave a research presentation on the Commission for Environmental Cooperation at Gonzaga University. Burkhardt gave an address on Canadian foreign policy at a special conference at the University of Alberta in Edmonton celebrating the 25th anniversary of the Canadian constitution.

Burkhardt is chair of the Bookstore Advisory Board and serves on the Women’s Center Advisory Board. He is the faculty advisor to the Political Science Association. Off campus, Burkhardt serves on the Executive Committee of the Boise Committee on Foreign Relations and the Youth Advisory Board of the YMCA. Burkhardt is also the southwest Idaho regional director of the YMCA Youth Government, which had its annual convention in January, co-sponsored by the Department of Political Science. More than 90 high school students from five schools in the Treasure Valley participated in the one-day mock government exercise on the Boise State University campus.

DR. ELIZABETH J. FREDERICKSEN, Associate Professor, notes her biggest news is her legal name change from Patricia Fredericksen. Beyond this unconventional activity with all of its attendant paperwork, Fredericksen continues to train employees in local and state government agencies on the challenges of workplace aggression. Her research in workplace aggression has been fruitful and she has been busy writing. Stephanie Witt and Fredericksen are collaborating on case-based network research that has been well-received in the peer-review process. In terms of service, she spent a great deal of time working with colleagues on the proposed PhD in Public Policy and Administration during the Fall, 2007. Fredericksen will take on the MPA Director role in the Department of Public Policy and Administration beginning June 2008.

DR. JOHN FREEMUTH, Professor and Senior Fellow for the Andrus Center for Public Policy, continued to serve as Interim Director of the Energy Policy Institute (EPI), a three university/Idaho National Lab consortium. EPI issued the results of its survey of Idahoans attitudes on energy, which can be found at <http://ppa.boisestate.edu/ssrc/>. He co-wrote, with former Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus, “President Carter’s Coup: An Insider’s View of the 1978 Alaska Monument Designations” in a book celebrating the 100 anniversary of the Antiquities Act published by the University of Arizona. Freemuth co-edited Environmental Policy and Politics in the West, with Zachary Smith of the Northern Arizona University, which will be published in August by the University of Colorado. Les Alm wrote the introductory chapter about public policy for the book, while Freemuth contributed a chapter as well. He was the invited speaker to a meeting of Region 4 Forest Service employees in Ogden in February.

DR. LORI HAUSEGGER, Assistant Professor, is the Department’s Pre-Law Advisor and the Faculty Advisor to the Pre-Law Society. She is also Co-Director of the Canadian Studies program at Boise State University. Hausegger is currently working on a large project addressing judicial selection in Canada. She and her co-authors will present the next look at their research question at the Canadian Political Science Association meeting in Vancouver in June 2008. She and her co-authors are also finishing revisions on a book on the judicial process in Canada. This book will be released in the Fall by Oxford University Press. Most importantly, this past year has been a busy one for Hausegger with the birth of her daughter Samantha.

DR. DICK KINNEY, Professor, attended the Western Political Science Association (WPSA) annual meeting in March. At the conference rountable on budgeting in the western states, he discussed the findings from the paper that he and Greg Hill, Department of Public Policy and Administration, wrote on the budget submitted by Idaho’s Governor C.L. “Butch” Otter. They were particularly interested in identifying whether and how the governor used the budget to promote his policy goals. During the summer, he and Hill will edit the paper and add an analysis of the Legislature’s appropriations decisions, including how they compare with the governor’s recommendations. The Center of Public Policy and Administration at the University of Utah will include their revised manuscript in the annual proceedings for the state budgeting roundtable.

As the main political science advisor for the political science-social science-secondary education program, he wants to hear from previous and current students in that program to tell him about their experiences. Kinney would like to invite past students who are now American government teachers to come to campus and share their insights with students who are presently completing their degrees.

As always, Kinney invites his former students and advises to let him know how they are doing. His email address is rkinney@boisestate.edu.

DR. SUSAN G. MASON, Assistant Professor, is conducting research with Suzanne McCorkle on the efficacy of roommate negotiations to reduce roommate conflict in residence halls. Mason is also conducting research on Community Design, Income Inequality and Social Capital Production in 34 Boise neighborhoods with grant funds. She presented the paper “Regional Influences on Political Identity: U.S. and Canadian Comparisons” at the 19th Association for Canadian Studies in the United States Biennial Conference. Mason also serves on the Demographic Advisory Committee for the Community Planning Association of Southwest (COMPASS) and is on the Executive Board of the Urban Land Institute (ULI) District Chapter.

DR. GARY MONCRIEF, Professor, published three book chapters: “Legislative Politics in the States” (with Keith Hamm) in Politics in the American States, 9th edition; “Term Limits and the Composition of State Legislatures” (with Lynda Powell and Tim Storey) in Institutional Change in American Politics and “Term Limits in State Legislatures” (with Jennifer Drage Bowser) in Institutional Change in American Politics. He presented a paper on “Turnover in State Legislatures” at the 2008 Western Political Science Association annual meeting in San Diego. Moncrief continued his role as faculty member at the Western Legislative Academy—a training workshop for selected members of the 13 western state legislatures—held annually in Colorado Springs, sponsored by the Council of State Governments.

DR. GREG RAYMOND, Frank Church Professor of International Relations, published The Multipolar Challenge (Cordoba, Spain: Editorial Almuzara, 2008) and is currently completing work on the third edition of The Global Future (Belmont, CA: Wadsworth), which will be published in the next few months. Raymond also published “Arms and National Security” (Belmont, CA: Wadsworth), a web-based interactive computer simulation of arms race dynamics, as well as the following articles and review essays: “The Need to Protect” in the Harvard International Review; “The Fog of Victory” and “The Elements of Strategic Thinking” in the International Studies Review; and “Preemption and Preventive War” in The Legitimate Use of Military Force (Aldershot, England: Ashgate Publishing, 2008). In addition, he published the following entries in North Atlantic Treaty Organization: An Encyclopedia of International Security (Santa Barbara, CA: Clio Press, 2008): “Terrorism,” “Al Qaeda,” “Basque Fatherland and Liberty,” “Italian Red Brigade,” “General James Dozier,” “War on Terror, 2001–2005,” and “International Court of Justice.” His article “Serbian-American Relations in the Twilight of Unipolarity” is forthcoming in a publication from the University of Belgrade, and his case study of the Mytilenian Debate is forthcoming from Georgetown University.

Raymond delivered presentations on “The Greco-Roman Roots of Just War Theory” in Bucaco, Portugal; “America’s Foreign Policy Challenges in a Multipolar Future” and “The American Study of International Relations” in Belgrade, Serbia; “International Consequences of the Iraq War” at the Carnegie Council for Ethics and International Affairs in New York City; “Ideology and U.S. Foreign Policy” for a program sponsored by the Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs, U.S. Department of State; “Internationalizing American Higher Education” at the College of Southern Idaho in Twin Falls; and “Ancient Non-Western Conceptions of Just War” at the annual meeting of the International Studies Association in San Francisco. He also served as a moderator of the 2007 Frank Church Symposium on “Presidents, the Constitution, and National Security,” and delivered a series of four lectures to the Osher Lifelong Learning Institute at Boise State on the origins, conduct, and outcome of the Peloponnesian War.

DR. STEVEN SALLIE, Associate Professor, taught a special topics course, “American Politics, Ideologies, and Popular Culture during the Rock Era,” where many students indicated that it was their favorite course. Sallie presented a paper on the contending perspectives on the special relationship between the United States and Israel at the annual meeting of the International Studies Association in San Francisco during spring break. Sallie represents the department on the Social Science and Public Affairs Curriculum Committee and is the college representative on the University Curriculum Committee. Additionally, he is a member of the Department’s Scholarship Committee and the Phi Kappa Phi Writing Award Committee. He is also an everyday volunteer for the Idaho Youth Ranch. Sallie always finds time to play chess, as well as to discuss salient political and philosophical issues, with students in his office and off campus. He has encouraged Samantha, his daughter, to work with the Special Olympics coming to Idaho in February 2009.

DR. BRIAN WAMPLER, Assistant Professor, published his first book, Participatory Budgeting in Brazil: Contestation, Cooperation, and Accountability (Penn State University Press) in 2007. He spent Spring semester 2007 in Madrid, Spain and was able to conduct comparative research in the cities of Sevilla and Cordoba. Over the past year, Wampler presented his work in Spain, Portugal, Great Britain (Oxford University), Canada, and South Africa. He will be promoted to Associate Professor, beginning Fall semester 2008.

DR. SCOTT YENOR, Associate Professor, continues to teach, head seminars aimed at Teaching American History, and write. Currently he is completing a manuscript on the history of the family in modern political thought. Several of the chapters from the book are under review, including articles on John Stuart Mill and G.W.F. Hegel. This year has been consumed mostly with his daughter’s cancer treatment and the arrival of yet another Yenor into the world: Mark Adrian was born in January.

Become a Member of Friends of Political Science at Boise State University

A recent outside review of our program concludes that the Boise State University Political Science Department “is excelling across all three traditional review categories of teaching, research and service...” The reviewers were particularly impressed that this department “take(s) seriously its commitment to superior undergraduate instruction,” and that “the undergraduate program of instruction in political science at Boise State University is one of the very best in the country among its peer institutions...”

Unfortunately, our ability to maintain such a high quality program is increasingly threatened. Even as our enrollment is increasing, the budget for higher education in Idaho has decreased. In these fiscally challenging times, gifts of support for the Department of Political Science are more important than ever. Your contribution will enable our outstanding students to join Pi Sigma Alpha, the National Political Science Honor Society, or help deserving students attend conferences so they can present papers. Use the clip out form to the right to make your contribution today. For more information on how to augment the department, contact the Boise State University Foundation, (208) 426-3276.

Thank you!
