

BOISE STATE UNIVERSITY

SCHOOL OF PUBLIC SERVICE

AT a GLANCE

WE SPEAK A COMMON LANGUAGE: SERVING THE PUBLIC

The School prepares students, public servants, and leaders to think both regionally and globally in an interdependent world. As such, it serves as a centralized resource for policy makers—to assist them in making informed decisions—and for faculty and students to actively connect and engage with the community and participate in real world policy decisions that have practical impact on our communities.

The bridging of disciplines across the university and the larger community enhances the education of students, allowing them to apply their knowledge and skills to the critical challenges facing the public, private and non-profit sectors.

NEW INSTITUTE

The Idaho Policy Institute (IPI) conducts applied policy research, economic impact studies, public engagement and surveys for municipal, county and state government as well as other organizations from school and fire districts to utilities, businesses and non-profits. IPI provides independent research and issue findings for policy makers to consider when making decisions. We tackle real issues facing our communities and not theoretical exercises.
